As of the data concerning January 2011, data on casual payers of wages and salaries are included in the calculations of wage and salary indices. Data on casual payers of wages and salaries have been included in the source data for the wage and salary indices since the tax account reform of January 2010 but have been excluded from the calculations of the indices for a year due to their incomparability. Casual wage and salary payers account for a small amount of the total wage and salary sum and the revision does not influence the comparability of the indices between years.
